

How to Pass the Part 2 MFFLM or LFFLM–

Wed 28 October 2020

Dr Sally Pickard

I have worked in the NHS as an Associate Specialist in Sexual Health for over 20 years, firstly in south east London and then Stoke-on-Trent. I am a Fellow of the FSRH and also have an interest in psychosexual medicine as a member of IPM (Institute of Psychosexual Medicine). When our sexual health clinic moved in 2013 and a SARC was located above us I was asked if I wanted to work as a Forensic Medical Examiner and I agreed. I completed FMERSA in 2013 and then when I was appointed lead doctor for SARC in West Midlands decided I needed to complete the MFFLM (2020). I divide my working time between SARC and NHS Sexual health which is a good combination for me. I love teaching and manage to do this in both my jobs. I also love studying which led me to do the MFFLM in my 50s!

Stacey Shelley

My career as a nurse started in 2010. Since qualifying I have specialised in forensic healthcare, trauma and orthopaedics and intensive care. Throughout my career I have been fortunate to be offered positions that guide and enhance my skills and knowledge, while allowing me to promote this niche area through the teaching and development of services. I have gained further qualifications at master's level which included advanced physical assessment and disease management skills, alongside advanced non-medical prescribing. I worked as a nurse practitioner within the NHS which again further built my resilience within healthcare. After a lot of hard work and dedication, I am pleased to add the qualification of Licentiate of the Faculty of Forensic and Legal Medicine (General Forensic Medicine) to this list. I have a passion for forensic healthcare and am dedicated to the improvement of services offered to some of the most vulnerable people within our society. I find general forensic healthcare intricate and fascinating which draws my attention and has led me away from the NHS, allowing me to push boundaries in the private sector.

How to Pass the Part 2 MFFLM or LFFLM– Wed 28 October 2020

Dr Philip Zack

Dr Zack qualified in medicine at University of London, and worked in NHS hospital medicine, initially in Paediatrics. He progressing on to train as a Clinical Geneticist, with experience in paediatric genetics and special interests in osteogenesis imperfecta .In his spare time he practices the Japanese martial art of aikido. He joined the MDU in 2012, and is an examiner for the Faculty of Forensic and Legal Medicine at the Royal College of Physicians.

